Yet once more a brave and hearty band of I.W.F.F. old farts came together for date with destiny, a work trip to the Eve.

We arrived at the Eve at about 9:45 a.m and quickly went to our work stations.

Bernie to repaint the inside of biffy 2 (pic 1)

Jack to his weed wacking (pic2)

Gord and "horse shoes" Bob to garbage pick up (pic 3)

John to scrape and repaint biffy 1, the fire damaged one (pic 4)

Mike to weed wacking with his nice new wacker (pic 5)

Keith to assist John with biffy 1 (pic. 6)

Don to weed wacking also (pic. 7)

The basher to his burger burning duties (pic 8)

After we were well into it, the Comox crew arrived which consisted of

Pic.9 Norm Nedernieder with his lady friend Barb, Cheryl Kissinger and her husband Chris

Pic. 10 Is the Kissinger cousins, we could almost be twins.

Pic. 11 is Cec, John and some others whose names I' ve forgotten and

Pic. 12 is the whole bunch of IWFF rascals just before we headed back.

No one landed any fish although Cec from the Comox club claimed to have had one on at the mouth, but you know what they say about fishermen. Some of the others who were camped at the village reported only a few dollies and no pinks.

A bunch went the mouth and the grassy bank while I along with Norm, cousin Chris and his wife started at the top of the island. After a while myself and Keith went to the boundary run.

The water was a little lowish and clear for this time of year while the water temp at the top of the island was a cool 57.5°F.

With this being the "off" year the lack of fish was not a surprise and I would think that not much will show up for about another 10 days.

The one BIG change is the number of rigs in the village that belong to the dry land sort workers. One even has its own porta potty.
