

Chum fest Report

Went out to the Nanaimo River this a.m. It looked like about half of the fly fishing club was there. Lots more fish than last year. By about 12:30 p.m., I was chummed-out.

I started with my "F-off" fly which the chummies liked but the hook was too light and kept on bending open. So I switched to my fluorescent green pipe cleaner fly which also was a hit but after a couple of catch and releases (I had witnesses) it was lost. Next up was a purple polar chenille egg sucking ,something or another, with a fluorescent red chenille head. It too also proved chum friendly and allowed me to chum-out fairly quickly.

Currently I have two chummies in the brine and some chum eggs getting prepped for red caviar.

Cheers, Basher Bob

p.s. Always keep the whacking stick close at hand.
