The Island Waters Fly Fishers

The Purpose of our club is as follows:

- To practice, further and promote the art of fly fishing
- To practice and promote fish conservation and enhancement
- To encourage fellowship and sportsmanship amongst anglers

The British Columbia Federation of Fly Fishers (BCFFF) is a registered, non-profit society whose main objective is to promote the conservation of the fishing environment in British Columbia. By networking with similarly minded clubs, organizations, businesses and individuals, the BCFFF provides a voice that reflects its member's and the public's concern for the future of B.C.'s natural resources. Our organization believes that concern for the future of our province's environment is not just the exclusive domain of fly fishers or other recreation groups, but should be the concern of all citizens. Consequently, it is with this broader population in mind that we strive to protect and promote our natural resources for the benefit of present and future generations to respect and enjoy.

Casting Clinic

John Snook passes on another casting tip at the April 14, 2010 Casting Clinic. Over 24 people showed up and many of those were novices and newbies to the sport. We hope that they were not too discouraged and will pursue it further in their back yards. Like most skills: lots of practice is needed.

March Meeting

Tony Francis, Guest, told us that he came in response to Bob Kissinger's ad looking for a friend. Thanks for coming Tony, Bob needs all of the support that can be mustered.

Wayne Legge won the Silly Face Contest (or was it another Gilly Draw?).

Jim MacFie won the first fly draw

And Brian Lapadat won the second fly draw.

BCFFF Raffle in Woodgrove Mall

15 great prizes offered this year

Dan Kowarske, new member this year, tries out his fly tying bench that he won at our February meeting,

These fly tying demonstrations, the Divas on the Fly Poster, the list of prizes and the charm of our members resulted in raising $1082.00 over the four days that we were in the mall during the boat show. Congratulations to Harold Tinling for organizing this and to all of the volunteers.

Guest Speaker Presentation:

Studying Westcoast Vancouver Island salmon biology and what it might mean for understanding why the Strait of Georgia salmon re- turns vary

by Ron Tanasichuk

The biology of salmon and their prey have been studied on the West Coast of Vancouver Island since the early 1970's and some reasonably accurate forecasts have been correlated since 2000. The main consideration for these forecasts has been the quantity of the food sources for the juvenile salmon as they enter the ocean. For example, coho prefer the T. spinifera species of euphasiids (krill) in August during their migration into Barkley Sound. During the years when these krill are plentiful and when there are larger numbers of juvenile coho entering the Sound at that time of year, the returns of the spawning coho two years later is up considerably.

The other factors contributing to returns are the effect of competition (e.g. herring at the time the juvenile salmon are feeding), and the effect of predation (e.g. seal population).

Ron Tanasichuk points out the causes of why salmon returns vary.

These conclusions were derived over a period of many years of studying the salmon at various ages and the food sources at these times. Initially the various species of salmon were netted quite frequently to determine when each species enters the ocean. Sockeye and chum are the earliest in May, Coho are a few weeks later and chinook are the last in June. Some of the salmon were examined to determine the food choices for each during the time that they are entering Barkley Sound. From these examinations, it was determined what food each species prefers.

Although Thysanoessa spinifera are very similar to Euphausia pacifica, the former are much preferred by most salmon. The next step in this process was to net survey the krill and do a relative count to compare abundance of this food source from year to year. The abundance of them became a fairly reliable predictor of the returns of each species as they returned. The proof of the prediction was shown the last few years when the sockeye returns were estimated to be very low until last year. Last year was a big improvement and Ron is forecasting another good return this summer.

The next logical step is to conduct similar surveys and studies on the salmon entering the Strait of Georgia and their prey. To date virtually nothing is known about these salmon's prey during their juvenile periods when their health and growth is so important.

Club Library and Videos

Don Ginter is the custodian for both, and he will bring your requests to the next meeting if you call him at 756-4867 or email him at: donheather@shaw.ca.

Check out the list of books and videos on our new website at www.iwff1.ca. He is revising and updating the lists and will be bringing a few of the popular ones to the meetings. They are free to members - just sign them out.
