

Reginald Lake, April 9th

Norm Neiderer [nnwneiderer@gmail.com]

Hi All,

Sunday, the Major and I decided to brave the weather and go check Reginald. We left Comox at 9 am sharp. It was overcast in Comox with a bit of blue so we thought that it might be OK at Reginald. Wrong! When we got to the lake it was windy and cold, 3C only. We decided to fish anyway. A father and son were getting ready to launch a tin boat. As it was their first time on the lake, we filled them in on what has been going on at Reginald. They were going to troll Wholly Buggers.

Lots of wind gusts with some rain. The water was very cold. One pair of Loons have made the lake their home. The Major got two strikes, the father and son and I got skunked, not even a strike. We only stayed till 2:30 pm as it was too cold to fish. At one point we all thought it would snow.

As we were leaving, Jesse from BCFFF was just arriving to give the lake a try. He's been on a three day fishing trip around Campbell River as he lives in Tofino. I'll email him in a few days to see how he did and I'll let you know.

The road is in not too bad with lots of pot holes so you have to go slow. The Campbell River Boys have put signs of No Camping.

A good day but Dang! it was cold.

The Crier

--

"Aspire to Inspire before you Expire"