

Tobin Lake February 25th

From: Jason Perry [perry.jason111@gmail.com]

I went to Saskatchewan to do little ice fishing at Tobin Lake with my friends Mac Warner and Adrian Tulkins. We went to do some Pike and Perch fishing. There was 3 feet of ice but it was 6 degrees out. The first day we were out there was not a fish in site. Nothing past by our holes, and nothing we did or tried changed that but it was a beautiful day. To say the least we were not impressed except with the weather. We moved to a different location the next day and it turned into a awesome day. We were catching 31-32" pike (around 10 pounds).

And when there was no pike around the Perch came out to play. That was like shooting fish in a barrel. I was using a whirling jig with a smelt on it. Mac was using a squid like jig, and Adrian just using a standard jig head with a smelt.

After 2 days of fishing I headed to Macs house where he taught me how to build fly rods. It was an interesting experience. Over all it was a great trip.
