

Chemainus Lake, March 2

Ian said, "Good luck if you go to Chemainus Lake....them hogs all got lock jaw" .....It was a beautiful calm overcast day no rain at all when Glen and I arrived at a vacated Chemainus Lake....got there to witness a chironomid hatch in full swing and old retired hatchery brood stock hogs motoring around just under the surface gobbling emerging chironomids..... So we each headed for a different turbulence or wake....casting, followed with slow hand over hand strips and were rewarded with several hits/misses depending on which rod one was holding, small(er) catchables and three hogs landed. Glen on a chironomid under an indicator and mine on a floating line with black and pearl green uv micro leech and the other on a blackish balanced leech under an indicator. An excellent day on the water with a good friend.

Sue...wee!!!!

Rainbow broodstock on balanced leech.
